THE TROUBLE WITH MODELS

Aliens might think
ALL humans lack arms.

Learners might think ALL Englishes lack Rs.

MODELS or INPUT?

NARROW SENSE (ACCENT FOR IMITATION)

- pronunciation given in course and reference materials (model = one accent)

BROADER SENSES ( MODEL = INPUT)

- teacher's accent
- classmates' accents
- beyond the classroom (in a globalized world)

“... rather than relying on models, context-specific and flexible evaluation of the content of pronunciation teaching and testing in terms of phonological features is required”

Andrew Sewell (2016), English Pronunciation Models in a Globalized World: Accent, Acceptability and Hong Kong English Routledge (Chapter 5)

A NON-PRESCRIPTIVE APPROACH

LAST DANCE

Marcie danced with Mr Darcy

Mr Darcy's fast and classy

Dancing fast and dancing faster

Laughed and laughed

And then disaster

Does "Darcy" rhyme with "classy"?

Last Dance.
Marcie danced with Mr Darcy
Mr Darcy's fast and classy
Dancing fast and dancing faster
Laughed and laughed
And then disaster

Ask not, "Is the accent authentic?" but rather, "Is the feature clear?"

SOUND TRAINS

shifts or mergers?

Shifts call for flexibility

Mergers call for ambiguity tolerance

MERGERS MAKE HOMOPHONES

This cow

A
The other

B
The udder

WEATHER

Whether the weather was good
Or whether the weather was bad
The weather was better
When we were together
Whatever the weather we had

FOR AND AGAINST

“We should stick to a standard native-speaker model in pronunciation teaching”

FOR

- Easier for the teacher (simple message & lack of alternative)
- Easier for the learner (single target)
- Empowering (accent bias exists in the real world: deal with it)
- Oven-ready (materials already available)
- Other?

AGAINST

- Unfair for teachers (privileges heritage over merit)
- Unattainable model for learners (and why ‘models’?)
- Unrealistic for learners’ listening skills
- Outdated (ignores global status of English)
- Other?
